

#CostingEquity

Recommendations for disability-responsive education financing

The cost of exclusion is significant – for
the individual, their
family and country

We must
ensure inclusive
and equitable
quality education
and promote
lifelong learning
opportunities for all

Leave
no one
behind

All government
and donor country-
based staff must
be trained and held accountable regarding disability and equitable planning and
budgeting

There must be
investment in
systemic change
which aligns with
education sector
plans

Progress
can be made
through more
effective and
strategic use
of existing
resources

Governments
must allocate
additional
financing for
inclusive education.
As part of this, they
must tackle tax
dodging

Donor agencies,
foundations and
philanthropists must
reverse the decline
in aid for education
and make disability-
responsiveness a core
funding criterion

Governments
and the international
community must
collect data on
children with disabilities
disaggregated by
disability type and
other demographic
markers

Inclusion
needs to be part
of all education
interventions in
situations of crisis
and in the 'Education Cannot Wait Fund'

Photo: © Leonard Cheshire Disability, Hamish Roberts.